

How is the fishing in San Pedro & Belize?

Article Number: 105 | Rating: Unrated | Last Updated: Thu, Dec 7, 2006 12:01 AM

Belize is a mecca for those interested in fishing. A kinds of fishing spin, fly, trolling - can be experienced all year long, and the abundance of game fish guarantees excellent sport.

The estuaries, inlets and mouths to the many rivers are known for their tarpon, snook and jacks. The lagoons and grass flats are known for the bonefish, permit and barracuda. The coral reefs support grouper, snapper, jacks and barracuda while the deeper waters off the drop off are home to sailfish, marlin, bonito and pompano.

Fishing is great all along the coast of Belize, from the Port Honduras and Punta Icacos lagoon of Toledo to Rocky Point on Ambergris Caye. Any of the many rivers which empty into the Caribbean along Belize's coasts can guarantee a daily catch. Most of your guides and boatmen speak English so learning where and what to fish will be no problem.

The waters surrounding Ambergris Caye abound with a great variety of saltwater fishing and the island boasts some of the best fishing guides in the country. Most types of fish, including bone fish and tarpon, can be caught year-round. Within 15 minutes of leaving the dock, you can be fishing in tidal flats or in blue water hundreds of feet deep.

Cost for charters depends on the type of fishing (reef, deep sea, or bone and tarpon), the size of the boat, number of anglers, time of year and current bank balance of the captain, but expect to pay around US$100 to $175 per person for a full day's reef and deep sea fishing trip, including bait and tackle, beer, soft drinks and lunch. The International Billfish Tournament is contested each spring.

FISHING ON AMBERGRIS CAYE has remained one of the Caribbean's best-kept secrets until recently. The extensive flats, a twenty minute boat ride from the lodge, are picture perfect. Shallow (2-6 feet) and with a whiter than normal sand bottom, these tarpon feeding grounds stretch for over fifty miles and provide the dining room for almost unbelievable numbers of tarpon.

Peak periods on the local flats are the months of May through November, though there are fish around 355 days a year, and Winter/Spring months (February, March and April) provide excellent opportunities when the weather cooperates. More importantly, it is uncommon to encounter other anglers once you have left the harbor area. The immense size of these flats, and the lack of fishing pressure has left these tarpon with an very aggressive nature, and they move readily to almost any properly presented fly.

Click here (<https://ambergriscaye.com/pages/town/fishinga.html>) for photographs of fishing in San Pedro & Belize!

You can forget the stories that you have heard about the relatively small size of the Belizean brand of tarpon! One very knowledgeable and experienced flyrodder at the lodge boated fifteen tarpon in three days and "jumped" 16 others. The largest was 178 pounds, and, as always, "you should of seen the one that got away!"

For much, much more on fishing in San Pedro & Belize, please click here (<https://ambergriscaye.com/fishing>) .

Contains these features:

Maps

Articles - lots of excellent information

Fishing Pictures

Boats to Use

How to build a fish trap

Bonefish

Permit

Tarpon

Snook

Blue Water Tournament

Deep Water Fish

Other Flats Fish

Geography of Fishing

Commercial fishing in Belize

One Man's First Experience

Basic Guide to Saltwater Fly Fishing

Posted : Marty Casado - Thu, Dec 7, 2006 12:01 AM. This article has been viewed 8420 times.

Online URL: <https://ambergriscaye.com/help/article.php?id=105>