

Tropic Air Suspends Service To Chetumal, Merida & San Pedro Sula, Honduras

Article Number: 501 | Rating: Unrated | Last Updated: Thu, Aug 3, 2017 10:29 AM

Tropic Air announces today (8/3/2017) that it is suspending scheduled flights to Chetumal, Merida, and San Pedro Sula, Honduras. The dates of the last flight to/from those destinations are as follows:

Chetumal, Mexico: Friday, September 1, 2017

Merida, Mexico: Friday, September 1, 2017

San Pedro Sula, Honduras: Saturday, September 2, 2017

“Our decision to suspend these three routes comes after an in-depth analysis of their performance over the last four months, including the very measurable effects of the May 1st increase in departure taxes. There is no clear path to sustainably serving these markets under current economic and regulatory conditions” said Steve Schulte, CEO of Tropic Air. “We thank all our customers who have supported our efforts to build these routes. It is most unfortunate for those who have come to depend on these regional links, that in the end, we were unable to sustain the growing losses”.

Passengers having ticketed reservations for flights with Chetumal, Merida and San Pedro Sula as part of the itinerary will be contacted and arrangements made for their travel to be completed or for refunds to be issued.

Posted : Marty Casado - Thu, Aug 3, 2017 10:29 AM. This article has been viewed 962 times.

Online URL: <https://ambergiscaye.com/help/article.php?id=501>